France Informed Arabs Are Ready To Display Force

Arab Council Lays Blame Directly on France for Attacking Syria in Levant Crisis

Cairo, June 8 (AP)—The Council of the Arab League has informed France in blunt terms that the Arab states will meet force with force in the Levant, and has told the French to get their troops out of Syria and Lebanon immediately.

A communique of the council, which has been considering the Levantine crisis, announced last night that measures were being put into effect "to resist French aggression," and laid the blame for "assassination, destruction and other losses which occurred in both countries" directly on France, whose troops it said, attacked Syria.

Supporting the demand of Syria and Lebanon for "immediate evacuation of French troops," the communique said retention of French soldiers in the two countries "is contradictory to the rights, sovereignity and independence which have been acknowledged in both countries," and would cause "permanent tension in the relations of France and the Arab Republics." This tension, it added, "extends to the rest of the Arab country, thus embarrassing the war effort against Japan."

(The communique was issued a short time after the French government, in a diplomatic countermove seen as embarassing to Britain, formally invited the governments of the United States, Britain, Russia and China to participate with France in a five-power discussion of the Middle-East question.

Neither Prime Minister Churchill nor President Truman favor a big five meeting on the Syrian dispute.)

Syrian leaders were cool to the suggestion for a five-power discussion, although Syria's action probably will depend upon any action the Arab League takes.

Meanwhile, the Syrian government was moving rapidly to liquidate all its relations with France. A Damascus dispatch last night said all French officials in the customs and wheat commission had been discharged; French magazines and newspapers were prohibited from entering the country; French courts were being dissolved, and goods looted during the fighting in Damascus were removed from French barracks and institutions.

U. S., Britain Are Ready to Provide Zone for French

Paris, June 8 (AP)—The United States and Britain were reported today to be attempting to carve out a French zone of occupation in Germany at the expense of their own zones.

France was said by an authoritative informant to be pressing for inclusion in her zone of Cologne, which now is in the British area, and Frankfurt, which is in the American and is the site of Gen. Eisenhower's advance headquarters. Moreover, the French would like the Saar basin, which orginally was included in the American zone.

It was reported that except for satisfying French desires the problem of occupation areas virtually has been settled. However, Supreme Headquarters has declined to comment on the zone boundaries, preferring to let announcement of the lines of demarkation, when fixed, come from Washington and London.

Elsewhere, however, it was reported that the lines would be essentially the same as those indicated in maps published Wednesday in Moscow, in which the Russian zone included the eastern half of pre-war Germany.

Informed sources said the western Allies had diminishing hopes the Allied control council would prove to be the efficient machinery originally expected because of Russia's apparent disinclination to give her representative, Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov, powers to act on his own.

These informants recalled American correspondents' reports that the council meeting in Berlin Tuesday was cut short when Zhukov said he had no instructions from his government to carry on further discussions until complete withdrawal of British and American troops from zones to be occupied by Soviet forces. But, the correspondents pointed out, that dispersal could not be effected until boundaries of the occupation zones were announced by the four governments concerned.

Meanwhile, there is no immediate prospect for a new council meeting, in view of the slowness of negotiation over the occupation area plus the fact that Gen. Eisenhower, the American member, is expected back in the United States within the next 10 days.

Small Nations May Accept Formula

decided by a majority of any seven members of the 11-nation council, so that, in an extreme case, the council could make an affirmative decision if only one of the big powers voted with the six small nations. Against this background the statement makes four main points:

Any question of discussing a complaint or dispute called to the council's attention would be a procedural question. Thus none of the big powers could veto it.

On the whole, the Big Five argue, the Yalta voting formula provides less obstruction to action in the interest of peace than did the voting arrangement of the old League of Nations, in which all members had to be unanimous before the league could act to preserve peace.

The great powers, the argument goes on, because they have the major responsibilities, must be in unanimous agreement on matters so serious as those involving the peace and security of the world.

Procedural questions are defined for the first time. The term was used in the formula worked out at Yalta by the late President Roosevelt, Premier Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill. According to the statement, they cover:

Decisions on rules of procedure, questions of inviting other states to join in council discussions, choice of times and places of council meetings, determination of the method of selecting a council president, organization of council machinery so that it can function continuously, and creation of subordinate agencies which the council may require to help do its work.

Baroness, Indian Chief Figure Now In Langford Case

New York, June 8 (AP) — A baroness and an Indian chief today joined the stranger-than-fiction array of characters figuring in the investigation of Albert E. Langford's death while the clue-sifting district attorney's office revealed that the art patroness wife of the slain man spent more than $100,000—instead of $50,000 as first reported — on personable Reed Lawton, a singer.

Langford, 63, a textile executive, was shot to deat Monday night in the vestibule of his Park Avenue apartment after two men, who asked to see his wife, failed to gain admittance.

Lawton, a dapper 30-year-old man with exaggerated sideburns, appeared voluntarily last night for questioning.

The district attorney's office said Mrs. Marion Langford believed she had spent about $100,000 to further Lawton's career. The night-clubbing widow told the district attorney she spent a great part of the money in night clubs in which Lawton sang.

Lawton told investigators he repaid most of the money given directly to him by Mrs. Langford. He said he received a percentage of the gross business done by clubs with which he was associated.

Police still were scrutinizing the 500 names contained in four memorandum books—three of which listed Mrs. Langford's expenses.

The district attorney's office said it would like to talk to a baroness and an Indian chief called Chief Redwing.

Lawton claimed the marriage of the Langford's in September 1942 was promoted by a baroness who sought a wealthy wife for the slain man. An Indian purportedly was the baroness' aide.

A friend of the Langfords scoffed at this report and said the couple met 19 years ago while their former mates still were living. This friend said the Langfords met "at a party given by a mutual friend, Louis Wicher, at his estate on the shore of Maryland."

Air Tragedy Reveals Hidden 'Shangri-La' in Hollandia

"Just keep sending us supplies."

Lieutenant McCollom said the explosion and bright glare of the burning plane attracted natives from the valley. He told Capt. Victor R. Myers, of San Antonio, Tex., flying in one plane over the scene, of the gift of the pig.

Most of the natives once thought possibly to be head-hunters, remain aloof but officers believe they will not attempt to harm the Americans.

"I am fine and enjoying it all," said Wac Hastings in a clear firm voice over the walkie-talkie.

Building Emergency Field

Paratroopers in the valley are building the emergency landing strip below the crash scene.

Two of the paratroopers reached the survivors within an hour and a half after making the jump. Others landed farther down the mountainside and hiked three days to reach the scene.

One of the fliers over Shangri-La described it as a richer farming area than any part of the United States or Canada.

The intricate problems of the rescue—the sharp mountain peaks, the treacherous mountain air currents, the clouds which hang over the tall peaks—are presently the chief topic of conversation of airmen in New Guinea. They argue far into the night over the best method of bringing out the trio.

The hidden valley was discovered accidentally in the spring of 1944 while an aerial survey was being made of shorter routes by which to bring supplies from Australia to Hollandia.

In an unexplored sector, the vicinity of the valley was approached some years ago by a ground expedition but never entered.

Nowhere between Hollandia and the valley is there a spot even for a forced landing by plane. The native homes in the walled communities appear from the air as mushrooms. They have thatched roofs set upon poles.

The farmlands are neatly laid out for many square miles. There is row upon row of water-filled ditches. The natives practice crop rotation.

Pilots report having seen "bears as big as donkeys."

The only gorge which could have formed an entrance to the valley is cut off by a mountain wall running at direct cross angles. This wall probably was hidden by clouds when the transport plane crashed. The rescue airmen have been quick on the stick to avoid a similar accident.

belief it was quite possible that Kweilin, another former U. S. air base site approximately 100 miles northeast of Liuchow, would fall to the Chinese.

He estimated that approximately 200,000 Japanese troops in Burma, Thailand, Indo-China and Malaya had been virtually isolated by the Chinese offensive in Kwangsi province, which has driven a deep wedge into the enemy's north-south communications corridor.

The high command's announcement concerning Chinese operations in the vicinity of Liuchow made it plain that unofficial reports two days ago to the effect that the city already had fallen were premature.

A battle for the city apparently was taking shape. The Chinese said the enemy, which has occupied the base for seven months, had strongly fortified the area and that a large number of Japanese in Fukien province, meanwhile, the Chinese continued their assaults on the coastal highway town of Futing, 105 miles north of Foochow and 55 miles south of the Chekiang province port of Wenchow.

Bases Are Raided

Guam, June 8 (AP)—Successive waves of carrier planes raided suicide air bases in southern Japan today and Superforts planted mines in inland waters, Tokyo reported shortly after warning Japanese that "medium and small size cities" would be pounded by B-29's just as their major cities have.

The carrier strike by 200 aircraft was the third reported raid in as many days on air fields of Kyushu, southernmost island of Japan.

Tokyo said the sea-borne raiders took up where land-based planes from Okinawa left off. They bombed and strafed airdromes at the southern tip of Kyushu.

At the northern end of the island, Tokyo reported night-flying B-29's mined the western entrance of the inland sea.

A combination rain of high explosives and 3,000 tons of incendiaries set fires raging through the arsenal and munitions-making area of Osaka yesterday.

Smoke clouds rising to 25,000 feet today still obscured the damage. Returning B-29 fliers said fighter opposition was meager but antiaircraft fire was heavy.

The largest force of Mustangs ever to escort Superfortresses flew a protective cover from Iwo Jima fields. They met only five Japanese interceptors above the thick undercast. Two of these were shot down and a third damaged.

August Hansen Is Found Thursday Dead Near Road

The body of August Hansen, 66, who lived alone in a cabin at West Shokan, was found about 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon, lying in a small pool at the outlet from a culvert under the road, opposite the Traver Hollow Inn. The body was noticed by Berton Finney, as he was driving past the spot and the sheriff's office, with Coroner Frank J. McCardle made an investigation.

From what the officers could learn Hansen had last been seen alive, by persons in that locality, at 10:30 Saturday night. It was noted that his watch had stopped at 10:35. Hansen's eyesight was said to have been failing of late and it was thought that this might have accounted for his walking off the roadway and into the pool, which officers said was only about two feet in depth.

Hansen, who had lived in the vicinity of West Shokan for the past 20 years or more, was a painter by occupation and recently had been employed by Arfst Johannsen, West Shokan boarding house keeper. In earlier years he had been a seaman. Only relatives, so far as is known, are two nieces, said to be living in Texas.

BYPRODUCT OF VICTORY

A little old last month's item stated that a captured German factory had made more than 2,000 typewriters for the U. S. Army. It added that 110 Belgian workers had been turning them out at 35 per day, for our army, whereas when they were working for the Germans, it took 400 workers to make 30 machines a day.

This strange and interesting byproduct of victory is pleasant on several counts. First, it's good to know the army is getting the typewriters without reducing the small stores on this side of the water. Also, it's good that the Belgians would so much rather work for us than for the Germans that they produce almost three times as much gladly for friends as they did unwillingly for enemies.

Then, too, every man, woman or child who has been using some old rattlebox during the war, often obliged to make it go for months without needed repairs, will welcome the thought that it won't be long now before the old rattlebox may be turned in on a good new machine that will space as it should, and print as it should, and in general give joy instead of grief.

Now, if new duplicating machines could be made available at prices not too far out of line with production costs, life would indeed be wonderful.

THE ROSEBERY HERITAGE

Famous names have a habit of repeating themselves in Great Britain. Churchill's reorganized cabinet includes, as secretary of state for Scotland, the Earl of Rosebery. His father had three ambitions and realized them all. He wanted to become prime minister; marry the richest heiress in Great Britain; and win the Derby. Of these, the premiership, though his chief claim to remembrance, probably gave him the least satisfaction.

The elder Rosebery was miscast politically. He was one of the wealthiest landowners in Scotland, and would naturally have been expected to be a Tory. Instead, he attached himself to Gladstone, and was made much of as one of the few wealthy peers who was a Liberal. He became Foreign Minister surprisingly soon and, on Gladstone's retirement, prime minister. All the while he seemed more in sympathy with his opponents than with his own party. Finally he gave up the party leadership, and except for an occasional blast at new developments dropped out of politics.

The son represents the National Liberals in the cabinet, continuing his father's tradition. With all his weaknesses the elder Rosebery was a brilliant man. Except as a Rosebery the son has not been prominent throughout his 63 years. But if he has inherited his father's ability and is skilfully guided, he may yet prove useful. Apparently Churchill believes he may.

WATER TRANSPORT

One minor mystery is why the United States makes so little use of its inland waterways. The Great Lakes carry freight, more this year than ever before, but little passenger traffic. Before the war a Cleveland-Buffalo run, which ought to have paid, was given up, and there seems no prospect of restoring it. Rivers and canals carry a mere fraction of their possible volume of freight.

In Europe it is different. Germany could hardly have lasted as long as she did without her network of inland waterways, canals linked to rivers. Russia's river system is the backbone of her economic structure.

One reason why the United States runs counter to the experience of other nations may be our love of speed. Vessels are slower than automobiles, and Americans hate to consume on the way time which they might spend at their destination. But for many kinds of freight time is secondary, and it seems as if the far greater cheapness of water transport ought to be utilized.

The Japs begin to realize that they started something they can't stop.

All these shortages should make people appreciate how well off they used to be. But will they bear that in mind after the war?

CHIANG KAI-SHEK STILL THE BOSS

Last week, quite a flurry of something or other stirred excitement in the breasts of reporters and commentators anxious to turn their backs upon the perennial meanderings of the Russians through the mazes of devious and foul international relations. So China looked good for a day or two and the headlines blazed that China had a new prime minister and that Chiang Kai-Shek was "out" of this or that. And the radio commentators, who need only a bone to produce a corpse, went at it hot and heavy. In fact, one knower of all things—I forgot which—blamed it all on Tommy Corcoran.

Well, precisely what happened? Nothing to tell about ordinarily. Chiang Kai-Shek remains the boss of that part of China which his armies control. All others in the government hold their posts at his beck and call. When he wants them in, they are in; when he throws them out, they are out. Much point was made of the fact that T. V. Soong would as Prime Minister smooth out Chiang's relations with the Chinese Communists. That today, as it was every day since April 1927, depends upon what Chiang Kai-Shek wants to do with the Chinese Communists. Sometimes he deals with them and sometimes he shoots them—and T. V. Soong has stood by and watched both processes with little voice in the affairs of Chiang.

The Premiership or Prime Ministership has meant nothing in the government of China since the Kuomintang took control. The theory upon which the politics of that country are managed is that following the instructions of Sun Yat-Sen, China is held in tutelage by the Kuomintang until the people are ready for a genuine democratic republican government. And the Kuomintang is held in tutelage—if you like the word—by Chiang Kai-Shek who has with inspired brilliance and rare capacity saved his country from conquest by Soviet Russia through infiltration and revolution and from Japan by corruption and war. Nobody can foretell the duration of the tutelage, and anybody heretofore who has tried to put a terminus to it has had his ears pinned back.

It may be necessary for Chiang to call someone a Prime Minister and someone else a Minister of Foreign Affairs, but actually it is Chiang who decides every policy and who determines the conduct of his subordinates. He pushes men in and out of office but always keeps about him his trusted colleagues, all of whom stem ideologically from the 1911 Revolution, no matter how young they may now be, rather than from among the more fancy dilettantish type who do so well in conversations with foreigners but somehow get all twisted when they deal with their own people back home. Some of China's most famous diplomats have hardly been in China, except as tourists, for decades. And there are some Chinese who make great news outside their own country whose total conversation with Chiang in a life-time has been limited to an inquiry by the Generalissimo as to how the weather is where they come from.

I make this point because Americans need to focus on Chiang Kai-Shek. He is an upstanding citizen who has been at the helm for 20 years and knows most of the answers. Since he first emerged upon the scene of public affairs as the head of a Communist military academy outside of Canton, I have been hearing people say that it is not Chiang at all who manages, but this and that assistant and advisor, both Chinese and foreign. And I have witnessed the spectacle of Chiang lopping off the jobs, prestige and revenues of this and that one, sending some to oblivion, some to exile and some to even worse places; but the Generalissimo stays on, doing a first-rate job in an absolutely impossible situation. And it would be wise to remember that because in the general American enthusiasm for English-speaking foreigners, we might bet on the wrong horse, as we have so often done. Let us stick by Chiang who has stuck by us for better or for worse.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS

Now that it has been shown that poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis) is more apt to attack children and adults shortly after the tonsils have been removed, parents and physicians are faced with a real problem. This is because it is unwise to remove tonsils during the cold months with so many colds and sore throats present, and also unwise to remove tonsils during the warm months (July to October) particularly with epidemics of infantile paralysis present.

Most parents and physicians like to postpone tonsil removal till warm weather and the child is free from school. Unfortunately some youngsters at the beginning of vacation time are run down and do not recover their strength for a long time if operation is performed.

Now that we appear to be having epidemics of infantile paralysis, Dr. Robert E. Howard in "Annals of Ear, Nose and Throat" suggests that to prevent infantile paralysis it is important, at least in the four months of epidemic years when it most often occurs (July to October) to follow suggestions of the Kansas State Board of Health and the Chicago and Boston plans for protecting the individual from receiving a dose of the virus sufficient to cause poliomyelitis. "Unnecessary meetings should not be held and crowded places avoided. Personal contact such as kissing and hand shaking should be avoided. Pets should not be handled and there should be protection against insects. People should avoid using drinking and eating utensils outside their own homes. Milk should be pasteurized or boiled. Individuals should keep fit, eat proper foods and get plenty of rest and fresh air. Use of antiseptics in the nose is not advised as it disturbs normal protective film (which lights off organisms entering the nose). Swimming should be avoided. Operations on the nose and throat should be postponed."

As to children needing tonsils removed because they are infecting the blood or are blocking the throat or inner ear passage, the months of April, May, and June would be the safest for operation in preventing the serious type of infantile paralysis from attacking them.

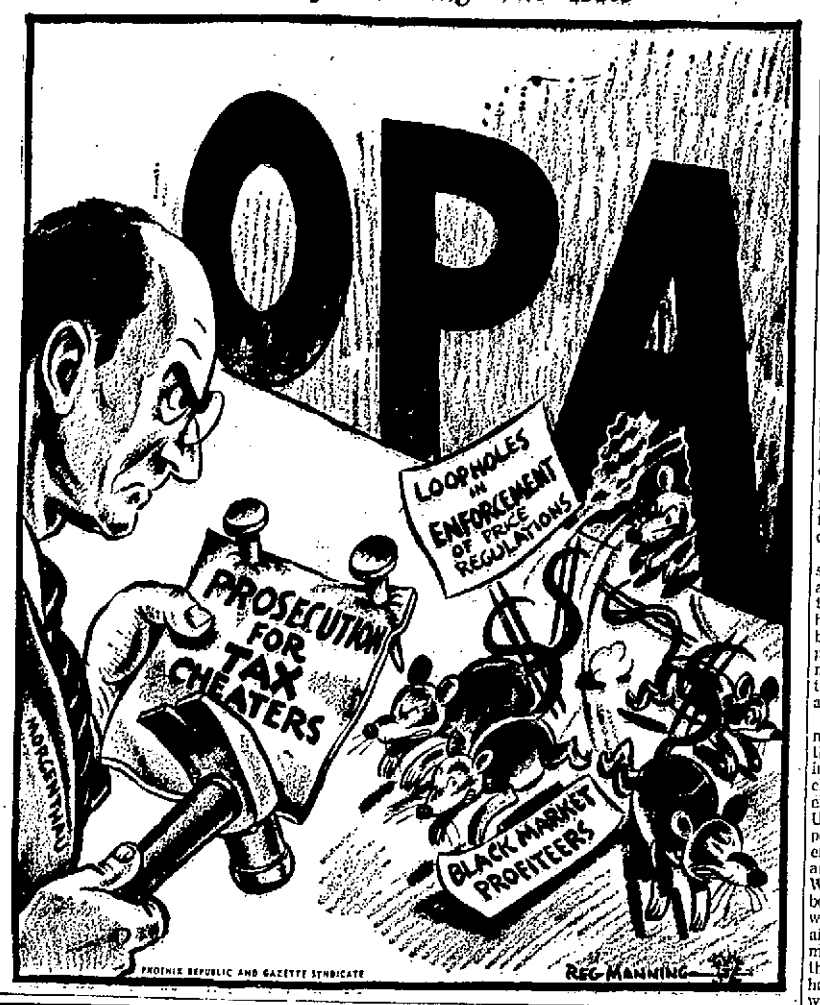
One Way To Plug The Hole



Washington in Wartime

By JACK STINNETT

Washington—Is President Truman's "honeymoon with Congress" about over?

That is the question political observers here are asking today. The answers will hardly lead you to any definite conclusions. Perhaps there is a shade of evidence on the side that it is over. The reason: simply that the President, in his few weeks in office, is showing himself a little too politically astute to suit the Republicans.

The G. O. P. has been banking heavily on the fact that 1948 would be its year to take over the government. The reasons are too numerous even to list, but they were counting on (1) the end of the war on all fronts; (2) resentment against Franklin D. Roosevelt's long tenure of office; (3) gains made by Republicans in state administrations and the House and Senate in the last 10 years; (4) the increasing antagonism toward bureaucracies; and (5) the bitterness against some executives Roosevelt had kept long in office.

When Roosevelt's sudden death elevated Harry S. Truman to the presidency, they saw no reason to change their views. As a matter of fact, it's no secret here that many Roosevelt opponents felt a little sorry for Truman and were inclined to step forward immediately to help him carry the tremendous load that had so unexpectedly been heaped upon him.

To the consternation of some of these anti-Democratic party elements, President Truman has demonstrated a remarkable ability to grab the political ball and head for the goal-line. What's more, he not only has most of his own team running interference for him, but he has confused the opposition by feints in their direction.

In other words, he has not only done much to bring the conservative and radical Democrats into close harmony, but he has confounded the Republicans by doing several important things they criticized Roosevelt for not doing.

His demand for sweeping powers to reorganize the post-war government along vertical authority lines and get rid of most of the "dangling bureaucracies" has the Republicans on the spot. The President has declared that he wants to do just what they have complained so long that Roosevelt wouldn't do.

He has had former President Hoover to the White House, across a threshold the latter hadn't crossed since he walked out in March of 1933. It appears pretty certain now that either as adviser or in an official capacity, the talents and experience of Mr. Hoover as a relief executive of stricken nations will be utilized.

He has invited both presidential nominees Alf M. Landon and Thomas E. Dewey to come to the White House; two more opponents and titular leaders of the G. O. P. that Roosevelt left out of his scheme of things.

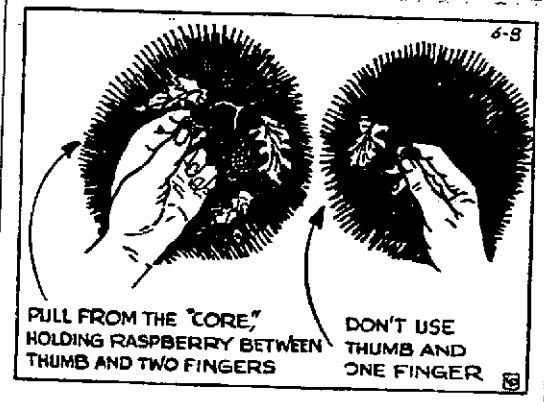
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Raspberries Taste Better When Properly Picked

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Association

NOTHING TASTES quite as delicious as fresh raspberries from your own Victory garden. If you are fortunate enough to have a "patch," or if you have a generous neighbor who has one, you will find that raspberries taste better if they have been properly picked.

Do not pick raspberries until they can be pulled easily from the "core." In dry seasons, some varieties do not loosen easily until they are fully ripe. A "dead ripe" berry should be handled carefully even for home table use, otherwise the skin may puncture and some of the delicate flavor will be lost.

The right way to hold a raspberry for proper picking is illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. Grasp the raspberry lightly between thumb and two fingers and pull from the "core" with steady, even pressure. Using the thumb and just one finger, illustrated, is the wrong way to pick a raspberry, for the pressure thus put upon the berry is very apt to bruise it.

The "whiskers" you sometimes see on commercially picked berries is really "rhizopus rot," which frequently develops on bruised or punctured raspberries. If the berries have been picked properly and with unbroken skin the disease is not apt to penetrate and infect the fruit.

Although poets and epicures may rave about "dewy, fresh" raspberries, it is really best to allow berries wet with rain, dew, or fog to dry on the bush before picking.

Pick early, however, for berries picked in the cool of the morning will keep firm longer than those picked later. As the heat of the day increases, berries become softer and the skin is more easily punctured.

"At Century's Turn"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

When the city's new public market opened on Field Court on July 19, 1921, the downtown market on lower Hasbrouck avenue was closed. The new market was in charge of William Moyle of Brewster street.

For approximately 75 years a public market had been held downtown, and when it was closed by the city authorities it caused considerable stir.

Alderman Ralph Mann at a Common Council session that year called attention to the fact that the public market downtown had been held for many years, and that fruit and vegetable growers in the vicinity of Kingston were accustomed to load their wagons with produce and park on lower Hasbrouck avenue.

The market opened at daybreak and before traffic became heavy the farmers had disposed of all their produce and had returned home.

I recall that finally the city authorities decided to allow the downtown market to operate as usual, and in later years it made a place for the market adjoining the Cords building at Hasbrouck avenue and the Strand.

For years a lunch wagon had stood on the site operated by Carl Pierson and another man, whose name slips my mind. This lunch wagon was removed to make room for the market site.

By opening this site, which extended from East Strand back to Catherine street, all wagons and trucks were removed from parking on lower Hasbrouck avenue.

When the market closed early in the morning the site was used as a parking grounds for the downtown business section.

Turning from markets to music on Sunday, June 28, 1931, Miss Virginia LosKamp of New York city, sang her farewell in the Rondout Presbyterian Church where she had been serving as contralto soloist and choir director for 17 years.

Miss LosKamp now has music studios in New York city and sings in the churches there.

During the many years she was in Kingston she was very active in the musical life of the city, and maintained a studio here. She also directed the Schubert Choral Society, for years one of the leading musical organizations of the city.

Miss LosKamp first began her long musical career in the downtown church in 1914.

Charles V. A. Decker of Albany avenue for years active in the social, fraternal and industrial life of Kingston, died on June 14, 1931, aged 63 years.

In 1878 when the former Boys' Social Club was organized Mr. Decker became the first president. For years the club held its meetings in old Ulster Academy, now School No. 2.

Active for years in the boating life of the city he served as commodore of the old Rondout Canoe Club.

Mr. Decker also served as president of the T.N.E. Club, a well known social organization of many years ago.

When the former Rondout Club was active in the lower section of the city he served as its president. The club had rooms on East Strand, over the former Amzie Osterod restaurant.

This restaurant was widely known among the business men of the city for the fine meals it served.

When the Kingston Lodge of Elks was organized on February 14, 1900, Mr. Decker served as its first exalted ruler. Later he served as its secretary for 19 years.

Mr. Decker for years was prominently identified with St. John's Church, and served as a member of the vestry and as senior warden.

For 18 years he was traveling passenger agent for the Hudson River Day Line, and after severing his connection with the Day Line he formed a co-partnership with Captain Everett Fowler under the firm name of Decker & Fowler to carry on a general insurance business.

In the years at the turn of the century when the old Colonial Glee Club was famous for its minstrel shows Mr. Decker was very active in the club and served as its secretary.

Regarding Military Training Bill: America Is Not Getting Truth About Postwar Commitments

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, June 8—Discussion in congressional committee of the proposal to make all boys between 17 and 20 subject to universal military training in peacetime has become rather unrealistic. The advocates insist that the plan is necessary to enforce world peace. The opponents say the whole thing had better await the conclusion of the war against Japan.

But the truth is that nobody is telling the American people anything about their military commitments in the so-called postwar period. The debate might better be centered on what size army and navy will be needed as a whole to defend the United States and also to furnish such forces as will be necessary to fulfill American participation in the Security Council of the United Nations.

To train the youth for military service is desirable but it is only a fraction of the major plan. Until and unless the people are told how big the army and navy must be and what the size of the total personnel needs will be, it is natural for the opponents to argue that the issue can be discussed after the war as well as now.

How big a force will America need to protect her interests in the new world of nationalism and imperialism which has emerged so clearly since the Yalta Conference? How big an army will the United States have to maintain permanently in Europe or near enough to Europe to take care of any military needs over there? What strategic bases overseas in both the Atlantic and the Pacific will be required so that our huge airpower can be employed at a moment's notice if the peace of the world is again disturbed? And how large a ground force of troops will be needed to care for the airplanes in those bases?

These are the vital questions and it would appear that the War Department has made a mistake in arousing unnecessary antagonisms over universal military training instead of outlining frankly in advance the whole military policy of the United States.

The Yalta Conference committed the United States to guarantee the peace of Europe by force. The commitment to insist on a voice in any European questions and to do away with special spheres of influence is one that gained widespread approval from the American press at the time. Great Britain is powerless alone to assure the military protection of European countries that are in the peace-loving class. France is too weak to do the job. Germany has been eliminated as a military power. Only the forces of the United States and Russia are available for the major job of enforcing peace.

Even if the needs for an overseas army in Europe and the Far East are not to be long-lived and the forces inside Germany are to be withdrawn after five years, there remains the problem of personnel for the United States Navy. The American people will insist that seapower—which includes airpower and amphibious forces capable of taking and defending island bases—must be maintained at a strength as large as, if not larger than, any other nation or combination of nations which could be aligned against us.

It may take at least 1,000,000 men to man the navy for a long time after the war and at least 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 for the army in postwar years. In addition to this a large reserve of possibly 3,000,000 more may be needed. This is where universal military training comes in—to provide the reserves. The regulars will have to be obtained on a volunteer basis. Doubtless many hundreds of thousands of young men between 20 and 30 will take a term of enlistment of five years, with a five-year period for call from reserve status. This plan of rotation will furnish much of the reserve strength needed.

The exact figures of personnel requirements are being discussed now by President Truman with high officers of the armed services and may become known shortly. But it would be surprising indeed if the men who have been commanding large operations in Europe and who know what it means to police Europe will be satisfied with a token force of occupation as happened after the last war. To exercise a diplomatic influence in Europe, the American armed forces will have to be available to back it up or else the viewpoint of the United States will gradually become meaningless. This is apparently to be a world where force alone talks. That is what has been manifested already in the councils of Europe.

The United Nations organization will be helpful in mobilizing moral force to prevent war, but physical force is to be the basis of the coming era of balanced power. The sooner the War and Navy Departments tell the public what is needed by way of personnel for our new military policy, the simpler will become the question of military training for our youth.

BABSON ON BUSINESS

WHEN WILL JAPAN SURRENDER?

Babson's Forecast on Germany Was Correct

Babson Park, Mass., June 8—May I start by calling attention to the definite statements made in my Annual Forecast of December 28, 1944 in which I said:

"The greater part of Germany's army will collapse before the German planting season opens in the Spring of 1945.

"Japan will not hold out so long as most people think. Japan will collapse within six or twelve months after Germany collapses.

"If Stalin's health continues, he will be the world's most powerful man in 1945 and may dictate the peace terms, especially for the Pacific."

Looking at the Record

I am especially proud of the above forecast in view of the conditions under which it was written. Readers will remember that last Summer the public were very hopeful and looked for the collapse of Germany at any time; but I said that there would be no collapse in 1944. Then the Germans started their famous bulge in the middle of December and Washington was very much disturbed. In fact, a study of newspaper clippings will show that I was almost the only columnist who was optimistic at the close of last year. But I knew the German temperament.

I have been in Japan since Germany declared war upon us and still have an agent in Shanghai. I, further, have always been interested in American missions in both Japan and China. I, however, am basing my present forecast upon something else which may seem very unimportant to many readers. I refer to the fact that my personal house-servant is Japanese, born near Tokyo. He has lived with us day-and-night for twenty years and was preceded by a cousin who was with us for seven years. Hence, I know the Japanese temperament.

Japanese Character

It is true that certain Japanese who descended from a famous old Prince have the "hari kiri" religion. These few will commit suiride rather than surrender. They now serve as human bombs. They, however, make up but a small portion of the Japanese people who, as a whole, are human like ourselves actuated by the same motives. A Japanese soldier will live on very little food. This he can carry on his back. They are tough physical specimens. Hence, it costs the Japanese only 20% to support their army of what it costs to support an American Army. But what of this? Japan has less than 20% of our resources.

Japanese soldiers will fearlessly obey orders and follow a blueprint; but when something which they have not planned for happens, they are lost. As a nation, they are wonderful copyists, but they lack originality. They had every movement of this War planned and charted before Pearl Harbor. Everything went according to plan in connection with Thailand, Indo-China, Burma, the Dutch East Indies and the Philippines. Then something happened to their blueprint!

During the past year their plans have been of no use and they have suffered accordingly. In my own household, I can give a wonderful banquet for twenty people if I give my Jap a week to prepare it, but if I bring home one person to dinner for whom he has not planned, he is completely upset. They prosper on success; but cannot stand failure. Hence, I feel certain that their collapse will be only a question of months.

What Does This Mean?

All the above means that the global war will be over before most people expect it. It will be over before all the boys in Europe have a chance to get to the Pacific. Except in special departments, the casualties will be light. Most of the boys may be home before Christmas.

The above means that re-conversion will steadily continue throughout the year and some time during next year we will be going full-blast on consumer production. A few excellent years of business with higher prices should follow. Furthermore, if we play fair with Russia, Joseph Stalin should be one of our best friends so long as he lives. Upon his death, it is very possible that Russia will be split up or suffer civil revolution. Then she surely need not be a menace to the British Empire, to China or to ourselves.

Old Man—Won't you have a cigar?
Young Man—No thanks. I don't smoke.
Old Man—Well, that's fine, but I have some mighty good whisky. Will you have a drink?

Man (to another at civic club luncheon)—I used to live on a farm where they took summer boarders and I always had to eat in the kitchen.
Friend—Were your parents ashamed to have you eat with the guests?
Man—No, it wasn't that. They said my appetite was so big that it set a bad example for the paying guests.

To me it sounded funny;
'Twas "Pay your taxes with a smile,"
But I found it took money.

A roughneck arrived at St. Peter's office to learn his fate. A man was reading the Bible. The new arrival directed remarks at the Bible reader:
Roughneck—I don't believe a word that's in that Bible.
The reader paid no attention to the sneer, who made the same remark three times, each time getting louder. Finally the quiet man who had been reading the Bible turned to the stranger and said:
Bible Reader—Will you please go to hell quietly?

We chatted with a friend of ours the other day about music:
Friend—We've become a very musical family. My son is learning to play the saxophone, another son is taking up the trumpet, one daughter is trying out her voice, another is learning to play the accordion and my wife is brushing up on the piano.
We—And what are you learning?
Friend (sadly)—I'm learning to bear it.

Painting by Woodstock Artist Is Purchased in Albany

Eugenie M'Evoy's painting, "Flowers," a still life in oil was one of the two paintings purchased by the Albany Institute of History and Art it was announced this week. The painting was exhibited in the 10th annual exhibit of Artists of the Upper Hudson held at the Institute from April 26 to June 3.

The show was judged by John Carroll and presented work of 58 artists living in the Albany area. Each year it is the policy of the institute to buy for its collections at least one work from those on display. The other painting purchased this year was "Abandoned CCC Camp," a documentary landscape in oil by Herbert S. Steinke of Albany. Both Miss M'Evoy, who resides in Woodstock, and Mr. Steinke had two works on display. Purchase prize winners of former years include George Ault also of Woodstock.

Good Taste Today

By Emily Post

(Author of "Etiquette," "Children Are People," etc.)

FELLOW WORKERS' TRICKS

Personal habits or "tricks" which happen to annoy other people are among the very serious faults which all, who come into daily contact with their fellow-workers, have to learn to correct or risk taking handicapping consequences.

A letter today describes a small fault whose great effect is shown plainly thus: "Please, please tell me how to stop a constant gum-cracker! All day long there is that constant "click-click" (her desk faces mine) until I am on the verge of screaming at times. I haven't been able to conceal my annoyance every so often but she goes right on chewing and cracking—I am sure she knows how it bothers me but she doesn't let on."

I am really at a loss to suggest a remedy for this or any other situation that sounds very trifling and yet can become torturing. If there is another space in which your desk could be put, you might perhaps ask the head of the offic for permission to sit there. Beyond this, the only alternative is to obtain another position.

Only before doing this, you might remember that nearly all people have some annoying habits or at least those which become annoying when incessantly repeated. The "click-click," which you now mind, might be exchanged for an incessant cough, sniffle, tune humming or something else. If your position is one that does not require your hearing, you might get wax stoppers and put them in your ears.

Children Resent Father's Marriage

Dear Mrs. Post: Would it be wrong for me to ask my fiance not to have his two half-grown children be present at our marriage? They haven't taken kindly to me and I think their resentment might spoil the wedding. There will be only our relatives and some of our nearest friends present and if the children are unhappy, it will affect everyone.

Answer: I only can guess the situation from what you tell me, but it seems to me that you will begin your future life badly if you forbid their being at the wedding. In other words, I think their father should talk it over with them. Tell them that he, and you too, would like very much to have them present. But that if it is going to make them so miserable they can't help showing it, this will upset everyone and it would be best for him, for you, and for them—all three—that they stay away! Then if they come, it will mean that they are willing to try to be happy about the marriage. If they don't come, it will not be because you have refused to invite them, but merely that you refuse to have your wedding day made distressing for them as well as for yourselves.

Endeavor Union Conference Plans

Four Sessions Slated To Be Held June 30

The New York State Christian Endeavor Union will hold four simultaneous local area conferences on Saturday, June 30, in Buffalo, Binghamton, Albany and Yonkers. These one-day meetings are to replace the usual state convention held at this time of the year, which has been canceled because of the O.D.T. regulations.

The four conferences will be held in the following places: Riverside United Presbyterian Church, Buffalo; Conklin Avenue Baptist Church, Binghamton; The Second Congregational Church, Albany; Dayspring Presbyterian Church, Yonkers.

The conferences will all use the same general program with theme for each group meeting being "Christ Calls Youth." The program in each city will start at nine thirty in the morning with the registration of delegates. All Christian Endeavor members in New York state are being urged to attend the conference that is nearest to their home.

Group discussion meetings, forums, and the presentation of the state program for the coming year will be conducted and led by the Christian Endeavor leaders in the conference area and other selected youth leaders.

A highlight of the program will be the radio message to be delivered during the evening banquet by the Rev. Norman Vincent Peale. All of the conference churches are to be equipped with radio and public address systems so that all of the delegates may hear the address by Dr. Peale. Immediately following the radio talk the various groups will unite in reepating the Christian Endeavor pledge.

By JAMES HUTCHESON

With the 38th Division on Luzon (AP)—Marita—all 110 pounds of her—had been carrying supplies to American troops in the Sierra Madre mountains for two months before an officer discovered her masquerade.

Then Lt. Anthony Cancelosi of Nutley, N. J., the 38th Division's civil affairs officer, uncovered the story of how this 18-year-old girl, inspired by a consuming hatred of the enemy, plodded up mountain trails daily with burdens of half her own weight and how she had become Marikina's most vindictive Japanese killer.

Filipino men and boys, who find it difficult to keep up to her on the trail, tell of the time Jap snipers were harassing the "human pack train" in the hills. An American patrol went after them. But while the soldiers were advancing slowly, Marita spotted the two snipers and killed them both with her rifle. In all, she says shyly, she has killed seven.

Cancelosi first became suspicious of the sex of the barefooted, trousers-clad girl when he noticed her long fingers as she reached out for her week's pay. A battered cap covered her close-cut hair.

Marita, he found, is poorly educated and speaks very little English. But in her heart is a hatred of the Japanese that gives her strength and courage.

Hadn't the Japanese burned down the home of her family of 10? Hadn't one of the devils from Nippon taken her to headquarters for questioning and stabbed her when she resisted his advances? She still remembers all too clearly how she escaped by jumping through a window and vanishing into the night.

Marita started her treks into the mountains two years ago when her father, Nicanor Martin, became too ill to continue carrying supplies by night to guerrillas.

Now, for the hardest of the jobs Filipinos are doing to help American troops, she gets the equivalent of 87½ cents a day, as do the men beside whom she plods. But Marita does more for the Doughboys. During the noon hour rest, she washes their clothes in mountain streams. When she starts homeward late in the day, she takes more G.I. clothes with her.

To carry the loads of rations, water or ammunition, running from 45 to 65 pounds, she often uses a "ping-ga"—a specially made stick over her shoulders. If her burden is a single box, it is strapped to her back.

When Lieutenant Cancelosi discovered Marita was a girl, he told her he would have to discharge her as a carrier. She insisted she was strong and pleaded for a chance to continue. He offered her other work under the civil affairs unit at the same pay. She said the pay meant nothing to her; she wanted to do the job that would help most.

So when the rains come, and carriers become an even more vital means of getting supplies to troops up front, stocky, determined little Marita will probably be in the line of raggedly clad figures plodding upward with their burdens.

New York Guard

The New York Guard—1775 to 1945
A Part of the Armed Forces of Our Country for 170 Years
Written by Capt. Montgomery Evans
Assistant Public Relations Officer, New York Guard

Major Paul C. Raborg, public relations officer to Lieut. General Hugh A. Drum and the New York Guard, calls attention to the fact that State Guard troops cannot be ordered out of the state.

The qualifications for enlistment are, briefly: One must be an able-bodied resident of the state, a citizen of the United States, between the ages of 17 and 55, and of good character. The enlistment is for two years for those without previous military experience. Veterans of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, or National Guard, who have had at least one year's service may enlist for one year.

Membership in the Guard does not relieve one from the provisions of the Selective Service Act. Pre-induction training in the Guard has aided thousands in the federal service—through advancement and after training at Camp Smith has saved lives in battle.

It costs a man nothing to join the Guard. Uniforms and the most modern equipment are supplied free of charge. Privates drill one night a week in the Armories and spend two weeks each summer of intensive training at Camp Smith, Peekskill.

Major Raborg points out that the benefits of exercise and comradeship offered by the Guard give discharged veterans an opportunity to keep up their knowledge of modern weapons. At the same time they can feel that they are doing a vital service to their state and country in assuring internal security. Every man who enlists in the Guard hastens the return home and discharge of a veteran from overseas.

The Guard needs over 4,000 men, at once. Employers should assist in recruiting by giving Guardsmen their time at Camp Smith without prejudice to their normal vacations.
